ALUMNI MUSIC RECITAL

Rockway's annual Alumni Music Recital was held on Thursday May 28, 2015 and featured the music of Dan Kruger '07, Anna Wiebe '10 and Anna Horvath '10. These three talented alumni, along with their friends Dylan White and Levi Dow, charmed an audience of 140 people with their eclectic mix of original and inspired music.

With the opening set performed by Anna and Anna, the evening started off with original compositions "filled with harmony and introspection", creating a calm and intimate atmosphere in the café inspired setting of Rockway's Assembly Area. The night continued with these musicians taking their audience on a journey through the genres of jazz, soul and R&B inspired pieces "filled with back beats and thick harmonies". Although much of the music was original works, there were a few familiar tunes which were "reimagined and twisted" in new and exciting ways, leaving audience members of all ages awed and mystified with their uniqueness and, at times, raw power.

Dan, Anna and Anna were charming, humorous and playful in their interactions with each other and their audience. They taught us that music of all types should be explored and that inspiration can come from something as simple as a car! It was quite easy to see and hear the passion these three Alumni have in their art, and to see such spiritedness in young musicians was inspiring!!

Principal's Message

WILD HOPE: FAITH FOR AN UNKNOWN SEASON "PART 2"

This year we explored the idea of Wild Hope: Faith for an Unknown Season. As a faith community, we acknowledged the challenge of living in a world full of possibilities but also filled with brokenness. In the January issue of Reflections, I invited you to reflect on your own experiences of living in wild hope, and encouraged you to read the news stories of how Rockway was equipping its students to explore their faith in this post-modern era.

On June 10th, Elizabeth Pfisterer, Chairperson of Faith and Worship, and I reflected with Rockway Faculty, Staff and Students during our final chapel of the year, about the new and exciting things God put forth for us this past year. It was our hope to share how we felt we embarked into moments of "Wild Hope" throughout the 2014-2015 school year. We wanted to share how we lived through moments of living in an "unknown season," and how something bold and beautiful came out of it!

Elizabeth reflected on our Spiritual Emphasis Week, held at the end of September, as an example of Rockway living in "Wild Hope." The week focused on "Healthy Sexuality," and featured Goshen College Scholar, Keith Graber Miller. The series focused on faithful sexuality, inclusive sexuality and shameless sexuality. Elizabeth said she liked how Graber Miller focused on more than just the anatomy of sexuality, and challenged them to think more holistically about it. As well she liked how he defined intimacy to include friendship, acceptance, equality and trust.

I reflected on Rockway's Inspection from the Ministry of Education, which took place this past November. Ministry visits are a wonderful example of living in an unknown season! Each inspector has their own perspective and opinions on Ministry documentation, and you don't really know what the focus of their visit will be until they enter the school! I am happy to report our Ministry visit was a terrific success! Our inspector gave a glowing report of our school. She noted the commitment she saw in our teachers for academic excellence, the concrete ways in which we are working with our English Language Learners, as well as our strong desire to "Grow Success" in our students through our evaluation practices.

Elizabeth also reflected on her Rockway experience over the last 4 years. She talked about how she has lived in an "unknown season," as she pushed herself to try many new extra-curricular activities including sports, stage managing and participating in Fed-Prov, as well as pushing herself academically as she took courses in all disciplines. She named she was grateful for the opportunities she had at Rockway, and for the friendships she had formed.

My final reflection of living in an "unknown season" included my experience participating in Tech Time-Out, an initiative where faculty, staff, students, parents and Board members were challenged to take a 3 day hiatus from their technology. This was done during Lent, posing the opportunity to spend more time listening to each other and listening to God. While I must admit I used technology during business hours, I did make a personal commitment to be off my technology both before and after school. Rockway certainly lived in "Wild Hope" those 3 days! We lived in a season very unlike the rest of the world and it was radical. While everyone else was running at a frenetic pace through the use of their technology, Rockway decided to do something unconventional. We stepped away from the norm and became more mindful of our relationships and the world around us.

As we bring the 2014-2015 school year to a close, and as you reflect on your own Rockway experiences as alumni, I encourage you to reflect on how Rockway prepared you to live in this unknown season. Take the memories of this place and celebrate how you were challenged to be open to new ways of thinking and doing!

May the summer and the start of a new school year provide many opportunities for wild hope!

TECH TIMEOUT

Well, it wasn't easy, but Rockway made it through our three day Tech Timeout Challenge.

During the Timeout, we powered down our computer labs, turned off the WIFI and brought out the board games for lunch hour! The contrast was noticeable – the halls were filled with chatter and no one had their head buried in their device.

All students went tech-free during the day, and most of our school community also pledged to give up their technology at home. In addition, forty-five brave Rockway parents and families committed to the challenge, alongside our Board of Directors.

The media was very interested in covering this event. We were featured in The Record, CTV news, the Kitchener Post and the Canadian Mennonite. We also had a number of radio stations request interviews, including a live in-studio interview at CBC KW. The story seemed to strike a chord with people, and to our surprise CBC Toronto asked if we would be willing to discuss the challenge on afternoon radio shows across the country. By the end of the week, our spokesperson, Sara Wahl, had done eight additional live radio interviews including Cape Breton, Windsor, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Whitehorse, Calgary, Kelowna, and Victoria!

A key part of this experience was the reflection and discussion it generated. Students spent time debriefing in class, and were also asked to complete a short survey to capture their impressions. Parents who were part of this initiative will be sent an online feedback form by email. Results of these surveys will be published in a follow-up article.

Thank you to all who were brave enough to try the challenge! Whether you chose to participate or not, the experience has generated a great deal of healthy conversation both at school and beyond.

LIVING LIBRARY

The energy in the room was dynamic as current students booked time with the “living books” at our inaugural Living Library event.

We were so pleased that Nathan Kruger '04, Kate Mercer '03, Kaylen Pfisterer '05, Zainab Ramahi '10 and Ben Wong '13 volunteered their time to be a part of this unique event. For two hours on Wednesday, April 1st, Rockway's Library Commons area became a vibrant meeting place for students to have personal exchanges with these fabulous “living books”.

Each of these former students brought their past experiences, their knowledge of university life, course programs and academic expectations as well as their individual personal stories. They had 15 minute time slots to share with a current student on any topic.

- “I talked to Nathan because his undergrad was exactly what I am planning on majoring in.....it was really good!”. (grade 12 student)
- “This is so much fun!” (grade 7 student)
- “Ben was so easy to talk to. We talked about the program he is in at Ryerson U., as well as the fine arts media course at RMC.” (grade 11 student)
- “I want to go into commercial advertising design, so I learned a lot by talking to Ben.” – Grade 10 student
- “Kaylen had tons of really good advice. She told me about what to expect around grades and we talked about the co-op programs and all sorts of insights about University of Waterloo”. – Grade 10 student

- “Even though Nathan is a lawyer already, he told me stuff about what it was like living in university residence.” – Grade 10 student
- “We talked to Ben specifically because he came to Rockway as an International Student. We asked him how we might balance having our Chinese friends, with making new Canadian friends. How do we make Canadian friends? He had some helpful suggestions.” – Grade 12 student
- “I asked Zainab about the Knowledge Integration program at UW. I didn't even know that program existed and because I have so many interests, I think this could be a good program for me. I also liked that she had a lot of travel experience and we talked about that too.” – Grade 10 student
- “I wanted to talk to Kate to ask her about reading. She had a lot of good book suggestions and I am going to look them up and start reading them.” – Grade 8 student

Keep your eyes open for future Living Library events at Rockway!

ROCKWAY'S ANNUAL FUND RAISING GOLF TOURNAMENT

The Bugs Bunny Championship trophy was captured by a youthful team of Rockway alumni this year as the weather served to dampen the abilities of the older golfers (it was perfect weather and that confused many of them!) Doug Blair, Amy Schlegel, Rachel Seyler and Andrew Schiedel carded a 62 which was good enough to walk away with the top spot in Rockway's 21st Annual Fund Raising Golf Tournament at Willow Valley Golf Course in Mount Hope. Every year Rockway supporters pull out the clubs for a day of golf, food, fellowship and goodies to raise funds through sponsors to support Rockway's tuition assistance fund (Share the Flame). Host Ron Schiedel and his amazing staff always put on a class day and there is always the opportunity to knock in a hole in one and win a Toyota car courtesy of Willy Heffner and Heffner Toyota. This year $28,000 was raised for our Share the Flame Fund!

Please consider joining us next year!

We'll be moving to a new date so mark your calendars.

WHEN: Wednesday May 18th, 2016

KATHY COLLINS RETIRES

Long-standing and much-loved junior high teacher, Kathy Collins is beginning her retirement after 18 years of service at Rockway. To mark this special occasion, Kathy was honored at Rockway's Spring Concert in May, as well as with faculty, staff and Kathy's family at a special luncheon in June.

Here is an excerpt of the heart-felt tribute made to Kathy at Spring Concert:

"Kathy is an approachable, kind and engaging individual. She is a person that easily meets people and can engage in conversation of any kind. She places high value on relationships and has a passion for learning. Kathy is extremely creative; her English assignments and RS assignments in particular, never ceased to amaze me, alongside her desire to keep them interesting throughout the years.

Ms. Collins is a strong connector – one of her greatest abilities, has been mentoring kids and finding deep seeded leadership in them. What comes to mind first and foremost is Kathy's dedicated work with the Peace Festival, an initiative that she, along with some of her colleagues, organized and developed over the years. The goal of this strong educational program is to introduce students in Gr. 7&8 to peace and social justice issues and at the same time give them the opportunity to discern and hone their leadership skills.

The Peace Festival program is often linked with a church based service project either at the local or global level. The students have collected and packed school kits for MCC. Then there was "The Right to Play" where the goal was to provide soccer balls for students in developing countries. Several years ago the theme was Building Bridges, which culminated in reciprocal visits between the Muslim School in Cambridge and Rockway.

Students over the years talk about the Grade 8 Ottawa trip having been a personal highlight for them. Ms. Collins has been a driving force behind this trip; providing a balance between structure and free time, and as a result, has built wonderful memories for her students.

As our students in Gr. 7&8 navigate the challenges of puberty and social interaction, a teacher who understands the students and is willing to "roll up her sleeves" in the existential moment is truly a gift to our students and their families."

On behalf of Rockway Faculty, Staff, Students, Parents, Alumni, and Rockway's Board of Directors, we want to thank Kathy for the valuable contribution she has made to this place the last 18 years. Her work as an academic, a mentor, and a passionate church leader and her love for kids, are attributes that will be missed, yet remembered!

WE WISH GOD'S BLESSING UPON KATHY AS SHE EMBARKS ON ANOTHER EXCITING CHAPTER OF HER LIFE!

Address from our Alumni Association Representatives

GRADUATION BANQUET

GRAEME: Good evening to the graduates, proud families, and the faculty and staff. We are honoured to be here and want to wish our sincere congratulations to each one of the graduates - this is a big milestone and you should be very proud of yourselves! Enjoy the moment! My name is Graeme Harvey...

ANDREW: ...I'm Andrew Yantzi...

ALLISON: ... and I'm Allison Yantzi (formerly Allison Howorth). We all graduated from Rockway in 2005 - which seems crazy that it was now 10 years ago since we were sitting in your chairs!

GRAEME: It seems like just yesterday when we would, one by one, ask Rolf Thiessen if we could be excused to get some water from the fountain, or go to the bathroom - only to all end up in the courtyard playing hockeysack. I think he eventually clued in and decided we could wait until after class to get a drink.

ANDREW: Or all the fun times and occasional mischief that occurred for those that were lucky enough to stand in the back row of choir (sorry Ann!)

ALLISON: Or taking an extra-long break between classes to run by the cafeteria to grab a giant chocolate chip cookie or a microwave heated bagel, dipped in butter (which was weird...do you guys still do that??).

Amidst all the fun moments (and there were many of them), our experience at Rockway went so much deeper. With the advantage of being 10 years removed, we can now see that the true impact is so much more than we realized at the time.

GRAEME: In fact, when my mom first told me I'd be going to this "semi-private" school called Rockway, I protested. I wanted to go to the local public school with all my friends. She swore that someday I'd appreciate the opportunities Rockway would (and did) present. Well - she's not here, is she? I can't take another "I told you so" - but...she was definitely right!

ANDREW: Probably the most prominent theme throughout our time at Rockway was the sense of community. We know you've heard it a million times, but that's still what sticks out the most for us - and also what we're most thankful for.

ALLISON: But what really makes the experience here truly unique is that the community extends beyond the student body and incorporates the faculty and staff. We don't need to tell you how nice it is that we were able to call our teachers by their first names - though it may not seem like such a big deal, to me that has always shown a tremendous amount of respect for students to be entrusted with that option.

GRAEME: More than that, though, you know that each of the teachers and staff know your name and genuinely want you to succeed in whatever you do. And, when you run into them 10 years later, I can say from experience that they remember you and are so excited to hear where life has taken you.

ANDREW: Even though Rockway is a small school, you are definitely exposed to a big world. From chapels discussing social justice issues, learning about other cultures first hand through exchange programs, or practicing community service during envirothon-servathon.

GRAEME: A couple years ago, 4 of us (including Bernie's own son, David) collaborated across two continents to win a cultural experience of a lifetime in New Zealand. For a few of the days of the trip, we had a film crew making a commercial of our adventures. It was one night, aboard a boat on a calm lake, when one of us thinking aloud said "Who'd have thought 7 years after we went our separate ways, we'd be here together on this adventure?" The director squealed from behind us, "That's gold!! The cameras weren't running though...so can you say that again?"

For me, it was a simple reminder. You have absolutely no idea where you're going to end up, but you've built a solid foundation here, both in and out of the classroom, that will support the rest of your future, wherever life's adventures take you.

ALLISON: As you celebrate today, remember to be thankful for the friendships you have built here - yes, many of you will now live far away from each other, and you all have your unique paths to follow, but, as has been evidenced by the many years before you, these friendships are special and unique and it is likely that you, also, will find yourselves, 10 years later, grateful for these relationships the way we are.

ANDREW: Also, remember to thank your parents for making it possible for you to attend this great school. We believe it was a worthy investment and it will continue to pay dividends throughout your lives.

GRAEME: To be perfectly honest, and we mean no disrespect to whomever it was because I'm sure it was great, but we actually don't remember who the alumni speakers were at our graduation, let alone what they said. This is a busy, exciting day and you have your friends and your whole futures on your minds right now (and probably some pending festivities) - so we will take no offense if you don't remember our talk either.

ALLISON: But we hope that you will take this one thing with you: no matter where you are headed, remember the gifts that have been given to you during your time here and to pay it forward whenever you have the opportunity. Rockway has prepared you to be big-picture-thinking, exceptional adults that can truly make a difference in your world.

ANDREW: Thank you again for having us. We wish you all the best in each of the exciting adventures that lie ahead of you. Congratulations.

Our annual Grad Banquet, for graduates and their parents, was a celebration of the accomplishments of our students. Included was the candle lighting ceremony and induction into the Rockway Alumni Association. Student musical offerings, Alumni address, parent testimonial and another amazing meal capped off a great day for our graduates and their families as they shared in the celebration of achieving this milestone of high school graduation.

WE THANK YOU AGAIN FOR HAVING US AND WISH YOU ALL THE BEST IN YOUR FUTURE ENDEAVORS. CONGRATULATIONS.
